

| LINE # | SPANISH                         | LITERAL ENGLISH                       | FAITHFUL ENGLISH                                | CULTURAL CONTEXT                                | TRANSLATION CLARIFICATION                                   |
|--------|---------------------------------|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1      | Como popular conseja,           | As popular advice says,               | As the popular tale goes,                       | Opening with a folkloric framing.               | Literal 'advice' is poetic; 'tale' fits better in faithful. |
| 2      | Por más de doscientos años      | For more than two hundred years       | For over two centuries                          | Emphasizing long history and age of tale.       | Natural phrasing uses 'centuries' in English.               |
| 3      | Con misterio referida           | Told with mystery                     | Told with mystery                               | Adding mystery to the legend.                   | Kept simple; 'told' fits both.                              |
| 4      | Y escuchada con espanto,        | And heard with fright,                | And heard with fear,                            | Emphasizes fear as part of the oral tradition.  | 'Espanto' rendered as 'fear' to align with tone.            |
| 5      | La historia de la llorona       | The story of the weeping woman        | The story of La Llorona                         | La Llorona's name retained as cultural icon.    | Proper noun kept untranslated.                              |
| 6      | Por tradición ha pasado         | Has been passed by tradition          | Has been passed down by tradition               | Focus on oral tradition passing down legends.   | 'Passed down' fits English oral tradition.                  |
| 7      | De los padres a los hijos,      | From fathers to sons,                 | From parents to children,                       | Family transmission (parent to child).          | 'Parents to children' is clearer.                           |
| 8      | Y de los propios a extraños.    | And from locals to strangers.         | And from locals to outsiders.                   | Tales spread to outsiders.                      | 'Outsiders' makes sense here.                               |
| 9      | Hubo tiempo en que ninguno      | There was a time when no one          | There was a time when no one                    | Old belief in universal acceptance of the tale. | 'No one doubted' fits better.                               |
| 10     | Puso en duda el triste caso,    | Doubted the sad case,                 | Doubted the sorrowful tale,                     | Sadness and tragedy central to story.           | 'Sad tale' sounds more natural.                             |
| 11     | Y aunque de diverso modo        | And although in various ways          | And though told in many ways,                   | Versions vary in detail.                        | Faithful simplifies phrasing.                               |
| 12     | Los curiosos lo narraron,       | The curious told it,                  | The curious repeated it,                        | Curiosity and retelling part of folklore.       | 'Repeated' better than 'narrated'.                          |
| 13     | Todos estaban conformes         | All agreed                            | All were in agreement                           | Consensus shows belief in supernatural.         | 'Agreement' is clearer.                                     |
| 14     | En convenir que sonando         | That sounding                         | That at midnight                                | Midnight as supernatural hour.                  | Clarified the phrase.                                       |
| 15     | En Catedral media noche,        | In the Cathedral at midnight,         | In the Cathedral                                | Cathedral gives religious context.              | 'At midnight' more natural.                                 |
| 16     | Desde el más distante barrio    | From the most distant neighborhood    | From the farthest parts                         | Urban spread of tale.                           | Simplified for natural flow.                                |
| 17     | De la ciudad, recorría          | Of the city, she traveled             | Of the city, she would roam                     | Spirit roams entire city.                       | Natural English phrasing.                                   |
| 18     | En curso veloz y vago,          | In a fast and vague course,           | In a fleeting, ghostly way,                     | Ghostly, intangible nature.                     | 'Fleeting' captures ghostly nature.                         |
| 19     | De un extremo al otro extremo,  | From one end to the other,            | From one end to the other,                      | Universal haunting across boundaries.           | 'Across the city' clearer.                                  |
| 20     | De la garita a palacio,         | From the gate to the palace,          | From gate to palace,                            | Span from outskirts to center.                  | 'Gate to palace' retained.                                  |
| 21     | Una mujer misteriosa,           | A mysterious woman,                   | A mysterious woman,                             | Mystery and supernatural presence.              | 'Mysterious woman' straightforward.                         |
| 22     | Vestida siempre de blanco;      | Always dressed in white;              | Always dressed in white;                        | Traditional depiction of La Llorona.            | 'Always dressed in white' clarified.                        |
| 23     | Un alma en pena, sujeta         | A soul in pain, bound                 | A tormented soul, condemned                     | Catholic concept of purgatory.                  | 'Tormented soul' aligns with folklore.                      |
| 24     | Por sus enormes pecados         | By her enormous sins                  | By her great sins                               | Sins causing unrest.                            | 'Condemned' stronger than 'bound'.                          |
| 25     | A seguir en este mundo          | To remain in this world               | To wander the earth                             | Condemned to remain, ghostly.                   | 'To wander the earth' clearer.                              |
| 26     | Vertiendo a gritos su llanto;   | Pouring out her cries loudly;         | Crying loudly as she went;                      | Haunting cry, traditional element.              | 'Crying loudly' natural phrasing.                           |
| 27     | Contaban que aquel espectro     | They said that this specter           | They said this spirit                           | Fear and belief in ghosts.                      | 'Spirit' fits better than 'specter'.                        |
| 28     | Deteniendo el raudo paso,       | Stopping its swift step,              | Stopped its rapid movement,                     | Spirit's movement has purpose.                  | 'Stopped' clearer than 'detaining'.                         |
| 29     | Lanzaba un grito, un gemido     | She let out a scream, a moan          | She let out a scream, a moan                    | Expresses ghostly sorrow and distress           | Literal and faithful aligned                                |
| 30     | Tan hondo, que el más osado     | So deep, that the boldest             | So deep that even the bravest                   | Heightens supernatural fear                     | Faithful smooths wording                                    |
| 31     | No le escuchó sin que en tierra | Did not hear it without on the ground | Could not hear it without falling to the ground | Indicates overpowering nature of scream         | Faithful clarifies action                                   |
| 32     | Cayera de aliento falto.        | Falling out of breath.                | Falling breathless.                             | Describes terror-induced collapse               | Faithful more natural                                       |
| 33     | De la noche en el silencio,     | Of the night in the silence,          | In the silence of the night,                    | Emphasizes eerie atmosphere                     | Faithful reordered for natural English                      |
| 34     | Como un eco funerario,          | Like a funeral echo,                  | Like a funeral echo,                            | Associates scream with death                    | Literal and faithful same                                   |
| 35     | Se dilataba ese grito           | That scream spread                    | That scream echoed far and wide                 | Illustrates pervasiveness of sound              | Faithful expands for clarity                                |
| 36     | De la ciudad por los ámbitos,   | Through the city across the areas,    | Throughout the city,                            | Emphasizes ubiquity                             | Faithful simplifies                                         |
| 37     | Y mil veces los que en vela     | And a thousand times those awake      | And countless who stayed awake                  | Refers to many witnessing                       | Faithful uses natural number                                |
| 38     | Por el placer o el cuidado,     | For pleasure or for care,             | For pleasure or duty,                           | Explains why people were awake                  | Faithful substitutes 'duty'                                 |
| 39     | Después de sonar las doce       | After twelve had struck               | After midnight struck                           | Signifies supernatural hour                     | Faithful clarifies midnight                                 |
| 40     | La aguda queja escucharon.      | The sharp complaint they heard.       | They heard the piercing lament.                 | Describes ghostly lament                        | Faithful enhances expression                                |
| 41     | Santiguábanse devotos           | The devout crossed themselves         | The devout made the sign of the cross           | Cultural religious practice                     | Faithful explains action                                    |
| 42     | Y alguna oración o un salmo     | And some prayer or a psalm            | And prayed or recited psalms                    | Reflects religious response                     | Faithful varies wording                                     |
| 43     | Rezaban para aquella alma       | Prayed for that soul                  | Prayed for that soul                            | Implies ghost's soul needs peace                | Literal and faithful same                                   |
| 44     | Y por su eterno descanso.       | And for its eternal rest.             | And for her eternal rest.                       | Personalizes 'alma' as 'her'                    | Faithful naturalizes                                        |
| 45     | Quien juraba haberla visto      | Who swore to have seen her            | Some swore they had seen her                    | Folkloric witness element                       | Faithful smoother                                           |
| 46     | Cruzar veloz por el atrio       | Cross quickly through the atrium      | Speeding across the courtyard                   | Describes ghostly movement                      | Faithful natural phrasing                                   |

|    |                               |                                        |                                      |                                                          |                                                                              |
|----|-------------------------------|----------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 47 | De la Seo, a igual hora       | Of the Seo, at same hour               | At the Seo at the same hour          | Names a specific location                                | Faithful clarifies                                                           |
| 48 | Que otro la vió en San Pablo; | That another saw her in San Pablo;     | While others saw her in San Pablo;   | Suggests widespread appearances                          | Faithful uses narrative link                                                 |
| 49 | Y quien que perdió el sentido | And one who lost consciousness         | And some who fainted                 | Conveys terror                                           | Faithful more natural                                                        |
| 50 | Refería conturbado,           | Reported disturbed,                    | Spoke shaken,                        | Describes emotional state                                | Faithful more fluid                                                          |
| 51 | Porque oyó el grito terrible  | Because they heard the terrible scream | Because they heard that awful scream | Reinforces horror                                        | Faithful slight rephrase                                                     |
| 52 | Tan distinto y tan cercano,   | So distinct and so close,              | So clear and so near,                | Adds realism to ghost encounter                          | Faithful natural wording                                                     |
| 53 | Que el ropaje del espectro    | That the specter's clothing            | That the ghostly robes               | Visual ghost detail                                      | Faithful simplifies                                                          |
| 54 | Rozó crujendo su brazo.       | Brushed and rustled his arm.           | Brushed his arm with a rustle.       | Enhances sensory detail                                  | Faithful clarifies action                                                    |
| 55 | ¡Qué reflexiones tan hondas,  | What deep reflections,                 | Such deep thoughts,                  | Describes reactions of witnesses                         | Faithful simplifies                                                          |
| 56 | Qué diversos comentarios,     | What diverse comments,                 | And various remarks,                 | People's varied interpretations                          | Faithful smoother phrasing                                                   |
| 57 | Qué sesudos pareceres,        | What thoughtful opinions,              | And thoughtful opinions,             | Reflects serious discussion                              | Faithful aligns                                                              |
| 58 | Qué juicios tan encontrados   | What conflicting judgments             | And conflicting opinions             | Expresses disagreement                                   | Faithful smoother                                                            |
| 59 | Hacían en los corrillos       | Made in the gatherings                 | Heard in the gatherings              | Reflects communal storytelling                           | Faithful natural phrasing                                                    |
| 60 | Niños, jóvenes y ancianos!    | Children, youth, and elders!           | Children, young people, and elders!  | Universal attention to tale                              | Faithful updates for clarity                                                 |
| 61 | Tiempos felices aquellos,     | Those were happy times,                | Those were joyful times,             | Nostalgic note                                           | Faithful smooths                                                             |
| 62 | Siempre llenos de milagros,   | Always full of miracles,               | Always filled with miracles,         | Imbues era with wonder                                   | Faithful smoother                                                            |
| 63 | Siempre en comercio directo   | Always in direct trade                 | Always in direct trade               | Describes simplicity of life                             | Literal and faithful same                                                    |
| 64 | Con alguno de los santos.     | With some of the saints.               | Even with the saints.                | Suggests closeness to divine                             | Faithful emphasizes intimacy                                                 |
| 65 | Siempre viendo apariciones    | Always seeing apparitions              | Always witnessing apparitions        | Suggests frequent supernatural encounters                | Faithful smoother phrasing                                                   |
| 66 | De ánimas que andan penando,  | Of souls wandering in sorrow,          | Of souls condemned to wander,        | Describes souls seeking redemption through offerings.    | 'Penando' implies spiritual suffering; 'wandering' fits in faithful version. |
| 67 | Y que dan mucho dinero        | And who give much money                | And who pay richly                   | Money for masses reflects belief in intercession.        | 'Mucho dinero' softened to 'pay richly' for naturalness.                     |
| 68 | De algunas misas en cambio.   | In exchange for some masses.           | For masses in exchange.              | Masses for souls is a Catholic tradition.                | 'Cambio' rendered as 'exchange' for smoother reading.                        |
| 69 | Pactos escritos con sangre    | Pacts written in blood                 | Pacts sealed with blood              | Blood pacts link to supernatural bargains.               | 'Pactos' as 'pacts sealed' emphasizes serious nature.                        |
| 70 | En que se obligaba al diablo, | Where they were bound to the devil,    | Binding themselves to the devil,     | Selling one's soul is a folkloric and religious motif.   | 'Obligaba' and 'diablo' translated carefully to respect supernatural.        |
| 71 | A trueque de darle un alma    | In exchange for giving a soul          | Offering him a soul in trade         | Bartering with the devil reflects damnation fears.       | 'Trueque' adapted to 'offering' to fit English idiom.                        |
| 72 | (Que era suya de antemano)    | (Which already belonged to him)        | (Already claimed in advance)         | Soul 'already owned' reflects predestination.            | 'Antemano' simplified to 'already claimed' for clarity.                      |
| 73 | A dar al nuevo devoto         | To give to the new devotee             | For a new follower                   | Offering new souls to evil forces common in tales.       | 'Nuevo devoto' kept as 'new follower'.                                       |
| 74 | Y a la dama, como a Fausto,   | And to the lady, like Faustus,         | And for women, like Faustus,         | Reference to Faustus evokes European legends.            | 'Dama' linked to Faustus to retain literary allusion.                        |
| 75 | Ya poder, como a Roberto,     | Or power, like Roberto,                | Or for power, like Roberto,          | Roberto likely symbolizes power or ambition.             | 'Poder' rendered as 'power' directly.                                        |
| 76 | O ya, como a San Cipriano,    | Or like Saint Cyprian,                 | Or like Saint Cyprian,               | Saint Cyprian associated with mystical knowledge.        | 'San Cipriano' retained for cultural reference.                              |
| 77 | Los secretos de la magia      | The secrets of magic                   | The secrets of sorcery               | Magic and astrology linked to hidden wisdom.             | 'Secretos' rendered as 'secrets of sorcery'.                                 |
| 78 | Y la clave de los astros.     | And the key to the stars.              | And cosmic knowledge.                | Secrets of universe often equated to mystical knowledge. | 'Claves' adapted to 'cosmic knowledge'.                                      |
| 79 | Todo eso en aqueste siglo,    | All this in this age,                  | All this in modern times,            | Acknowledges the era's end and changing beliefs.         | 'Siglo' translated to 'modern times' to reflect context.                     |
| 80 | Cuyo término contamos,        | Whose end we count,                    | Whose end draws near,                | References cyclical or finite nature of ages.            | 'Contamos' as 'draws near' softens literal phrasing.                         |
| 81 | No pasa de una conseja        | Is no more than a tale                 | Is now just legend                   | A tale that has faded from common telling.               | 'Conseja' softened to 'legend'.                                              |
| 82 | Que apenas en el teatro       | That barely in the theater             | Hardly told in theaters              | Theatrical mention hints at performance traditions.      | 'Apenas' as 'hardly' fits natural English.                                   |

|     |                                |                                    |                                   |                                                             |                                                  |
|-----|--------------------------------|------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| 83  | Resalta si se presenta         | Stands out if presented            | Unless in rare moments            | Stories revived occasionally for cultural memory.           | 'Resalta' adapted to 'stands out'.               |
| 84  | Fray Obediente Forzado.        | Brother Obedient Forced.           | Brother Obedient Forced appears.  | Named figure suggests moral or social archetype.            | Retained as-is as a title.                       |
| 85  | Pero ya de reflexiones         | But enough of reflections          | But enough reflection             | Narrative pause for reflection before main tale.            | 'Reflexiones' translated to 'reflection'.        |
| 86  | Los lectores no harán caso,    | Readers will pay no heed,          | Readers will surely ignore,       | Acknowledges potential reader skepticism.                   | 'No harán caso' as 'will ignore'.                |
| 87  | Y a fe que razón les sobra     | And with good reason               | With good reason,                 | Acceptance of varied reader views.                          | 'Les sobra' simplified to 'good reason'.         |
| 88  | Que el prólogo está muy largo, | As the prologue is too long,       | For this introduction is lengthy, | Narrator's apology or justification for length.             | 'Prólogo' as 'introduction' is clearer.          |
| 89  | Y es fuerza entrar en materia  | And we must get to the point       | And we must get to the tale       | Encourages focus on the legend itself.                      | 'Es fuerza' adapted as 'we must'.                |
| 90  | Refiriendo lo que antaño,      | Recalling what once,               | Telling again of old,             | Framing device to connect past and present.                 | 'Antaño' kept as 'old' for brevity.              |
| 91  | Acerca de La Llorona,          | About La Llorona,                  | The story of La Llorona,          | La Llorona myth spans social strata.                        | 'La Llorona' kept in Spanish.                    |
| 92  | Oyeron tontos y sabios,        | Fools and sages heard,             | Known by fools and sages alike,   | Tales shared by both educated and common folk.              | 'Tontos y sabios' as 'fools and sages'.          |
| 93  | Y el lector tenga paciencia    | And the reader be patient          | So let the reader be patient      | Narrative humility, inviting patience.                      | 'Paciencia' retained as 'be patient'.            |
| 94  | Que está de fe perdonado,      | He is forgiven by faith,           | He is forgiven in advance,        | Author absolves readers for disbelief.                      | 'De fe perdonado' translated carefully.          |
| 95  | Pues basta que se divierta     | For it is enough he enjoys himself | If he finds delight in the tale   | Emphasizes enjoyment despite veracity.                      | 'Divierta' as 'finds delight'.                   |
| 96  | Aunque declare que es falso.   | Even if he claims it is false.     | Even should he call it false.     | Self-aware storytelling style.                              | 'Aunque declare' rendered to fit tone.           |
| 97  | Esbelta como el palmero        | Slender as the palm tree           | Slender like a palm tree          | Natural beauty metaphor for purity.                         | 'Esbelta' as 'slender'.                          |
| 98  | Que en las orillas del lago    | That on the lake's shore           | On the lake's edge                | Setting the stage for next poetic description.              | 'Orillas' simplified to 'lake's edge'.           |
| 99  | Se columpia al leve impulso    | Sways lightly                      | Swaying softly                    | Evokes delicate natural motion.                             | 'Leve impulso' as 'softly'.                      |
| 100 | De los céfiros de mayo;        | With the zephyrs of May;           | In the gentle May breeze;         | Gentle imagery tied to seasonal beauty.                     | 'Céfiros' clarified as 'gentle May breeze'.      |
| 101 | Blanca como la azucena         | White as the lily                  | White as the lily,                | Luisa is described with nature and divine beauty metaphors. | Literal keeps 'white as lily'; faithful smooths. |
| 102 | Cuyo cáliz de alabastro,       | Whose chalice is of alabaster,     | With alabaster chalice,           | Alabaster signals purity and fragility.                     | Faithful shortens for flow.                      |
| 103 | Con oro y púrpura vela         | With gold and purple it veils      | Veiled in gold and purple,        | Gold/purple signify nobility and seduction.                 | Faithful integrates colors poetically.           |
| 104 | La lumbre del sol de ocaso;    | The light of the setting sun;      | Glowing with sunset light;        | Sunset suggests fleeting, tender beauty.                    | Faithful uses 'glowing' naturally.               |
| 105 | Con ojos negros y ardientes,   | With black and burning eyes,       | With dark and burning eyes,       | Dark eyes imply passion.                                    | Faithful retains passionate description.         |
| 106 | Con el cabello rizado,         | With curly hair,                   | With curly hair,                  | Curly hair symbolizes vitality.                             | Faithful keeps vivid hair description.           |
| 107 | Que baja en revueltas ondas    | That falls in wild waves           | Falling in wild waves             | Wild waves evoke natural, untamed allure.                   | Faithful smooths waves imagery.                  |
| 108 | Sobre unos hombros de mármol;  | Over marble shoulders;             | Upon marble shoulders;            | Marble shoulders evoke cold, divine beauty.                 | Faithful simplifies marble metaphor.             |
| 109 | Con labios rojos y frescos     | With red and fresh lips            | With red, fresh lips              | Red lips signify desire and youth.                          | Faithful streamlines lips description.           |
| 110 | Como flores de granado,        | Like pomegranate flowers,          | Like pomegranate blooms,          | Pomegranate traditionally symbolizes fertility.             | Faithful uses 'blooms' poetically.               |
| 111 | Luciendo como diadema,         | Shining like a diadem,             | A shining diadem                  | Diadem signals royalty.                                     | Faithful condenses diadem image.                 |
| 112 | Sobre todos sus encantos,      | Over all her charms,               | Adorns all her charms,            | Adornment implies social status.                            | Faithful adjusts for readability.                |
| 113 | El poderoso atractivo          | The powerful attraction            | The powerful allure               | Youth as peak beauty is emphasized.                         | Faithful interprets as allure.                   |
| 114 | De los juveniles años:         | Of youthful years:                 | Of her youthful years:            | Cultural focus on youthful allure.                          | Faithful clarifies youthful charm.               |
| 115 | Tal es Luisa, la hechicera,    | Such is Luisa, the enchantress,    | Such is Luisa, the sorceress,     | Sorceress invokes allure and forbidden charm.               | Faithful uses 'sorceress' culturally.            |
| 116 | Que en un rincón apartado      | Who in a hidden corner             | Living in a secluded corner       | Hidden corners suggest secrecy.                             | Faithful simplifies location.                    |
| 117 | De callejuela sombría,         | Of a dark alley,                   | Of a dark alley,                  | Dark alley symbolizes forbidden beauty.                     | Faithful simplifies alley reference.             |
| 118 | En pobre y oscuro cuarto,      | In a poor and gloomy room,         | In a poor, shadowy room,          | Gloomy yet content emphasizes purity.                       | Faithful keeps humble setting.                   |
| 119 | Vive llena de contento         | Lives full of contentment          | She lives contentedly             | Unafraid shows innocence.                                   | Faithful simplifies emotional tone.              |
| 120 | Y sin temer los engaños        | And without fearing deceit         | And fears no deceit               | World harms beauty—cultural caution.                        | Faithful clarifies deceit.                       |
| 121 | Del mundo que siempre ha sido  | Of the world that always has been  | Of a world that always harms      | Beauty as danger motif.                                     | Faithful simplifies cultural warning.            |
| 122 | Para las hermosas, daño.       | For beautiful women, harmful.      | The beautiful.                    | Fame rising from humble origins.                            | Faithful keeps beauty-danger idea.               |
| 123 | La fama de su belleza          | Her fame for beauty                | Her beauty's fame                 | Beauty transcends social divisions.                         | Faithful simplifies fame.                        |
| 124 | Se va veloz dilatando          | Spreads swiftly                    | Spreads swiftly                   | Attraction spans societal ranks.                            | Faithful merges social ranks.                    |
| 125 | Desde la clase más pobre       | From the poorest class             | From the poor                     | Universal desire motif.                                     | Faithful keeps suitor idea.                      |

|     |                                  |                                  |                                  |                                                                                               |                                                          |
|-----|----------------------------------|----------------------------------|----------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------|
| 126 | Hasta los próceres altos.        | To the noble elites.             | To the noble elites.             | Gaze conveys admiration and temptation.                                                       | Faithful simplifies suitor desire.                       |
| 127 | No hay galán que no procure      | No suitor does not try           | Every suitor tries               | Open/secret admiration—social dynamics.                                                       | Faithful merges direct/indirect gaze.                    |
| 128 | Ya de frente, ya al soslayo,     | Whether straight on or sideways, | Whether openly or secretly,      | Face symbolizes angelic seduction.                                                            | Faithful makes 'angelic grace' clear.                    |
| 129 | Mirar el rostro hechicero        | To see her enchanting face       | To behold her bewitching face    | Archangel metaphor elevates allure.                                                           | Faithful elevates archangel reference.                   |
| 130 | De aquel arcángel humano.        | Of that human archangel.         | Of angelic grace.                | Alley changes from fear to allure.                                                            | Faithful adjusts 'deserted alley'.                       |
| 131 | La desierta callejuela,          | The deserted alley,              | The deserted alley,              | Alley now site of desire.                                                                     | Faithful conveys fear change.                            |
| 132 | Que antes infundiera espanto,    | That once brought fear,          | Once feared,                     | Admirers replace fear.                                                                        | Faithful simplifies admirers.                            |
| 133 | Se llena de rondadores           | Fills with prowlers              | Is filled with admirers          | Night links to hidden love.                                                                   | Faithful keeps night/hidden love idea.                   |
| 134 | En las noches, y no es raro      | At night, and it's not rare      | At night, often                  | Songs reflect romantic yearning.                                                              | Faithful renders poetic lament.                          |
| 135 | Escuchar trovas y endechas       | To hear ballads and laments      | Singing ballads and laments      | Songs reflect romantic yearning.                                                              | Faithful renders poetic lament.                          |
| 136 | Y cuchilladas y escándalo,       | And stabbings and scandal,       | And stabbings and scandal,       | Evokes violence and unrest in the scene.                                                      | Faithful retains 'scandal' for dramatic impact.          |
| 137 | Que sobre las piedras deja       | That upon the stones leaves      | Leaving marks upon the stones,   | Imagery of violent traces left behind.                                                        | Faithful naturalizes sentence structure.                 |
| 138 | Memoria, en sangrientos rastros. | Memory, in bloody traces.        | Memory in bloody traces.         | Highlights lingering presence of violence.                                                    | Faithful keeps structure but clarifies flow.             |
| 139 | Pero la puerta de Luisa,         | But the door of Luisa,           | But Luisa's door,                | Introduces Luisa's home as closed off.                                                        | Faithful simplifies for smoother reading.                |
| 140 | Cual lápida de un osario,        | Like a gravestone of an ossuary, | Like a tombstone,                | Creates a metaphor of death and sealing.                                                      | Faithful uses 'tombstone' for clarity.                   |
| 141 | Cerrada siempre aparece;         | Closed it always appears;        | Always appears shut;             | Emphasizes isolation.                                                                         | Faithful streamlines the phrasing.                       |
| 142 | Ni siquiera rumor vago           | Not even vague rumor             | Not even a whisper               | Suggests utter silence and mystery.                                                           | Faithful naturalizes 'rumor' as 'whisper'.               |
| 143 | Tras ella la gente escucha,      | Behind it the people listen,     | Behind it people listen,         | Indicates curiosity and fear.                                                                 | Faithful simplifies slightly.                            |
| 144 | Ni de luz un leve rayo           | Nor of light a slight ray        | Not even a faint ray of light    | Suggests utter darkness.                                                                      | Faithful expands slightly for clarity.                   |
| 145 | Denuncia entre las rendijas      | Denounces through the cracks     | Shines through the cracks,       | No light escapes.                                                                             | Faithful adjusts 'denounce' into visual imagery.         |
| 146 | Que alguien habita en el cuarto. | That someone inhabits the room.  | That someone lives in the room.  | Implies hidden presence.                                                                      | Faithful makes smoother English phrase.                  |
| 147 | Al fondo de la calleja           | At the back of the alley,        | At the far end of the alley,     | Sets a spooky scene.                                                                          | Faithful naturalizes 'back' to 'far end'.                |
| 148 | Hay sobre el muro un retablo,    | There on the wall an altarpiece, | An altarpiece hangs on the wall, | Religious imagery.                                                                            | Faithful adjusts word order.                             |
| 149 | Y un farolillo que cuelga        | And a little lantern that hangs  | And a small lantern hangs,       | Adds to dark, mysterious atmosphere.                                                          | Faithful naturalizes diminutive form.                    |
| 150 | Penosamente alumbrando,          | Painfully illuminating,          | Dimly lighting the area,         | Suggests weak, mournful light.                                                                | Faithful adjusts 'painfully' to 'dimly'.                 |
| 151 | A costa de algún devoto,         | At the cost of some devotee,     | At a devotee's expense,          | Reflects sacrifice or offering.                                                               | Faithful simplifies for readability.                     |
| 152 | La tosca imagen de un santo.     | The rough image of a saint.      | A rough image of a saint.        | Simple religious reference.                                                                   | Literal and faithful identical.                          |
| 153 | En largas y oscuras noches,      | In long and dark nights,         | During long, dark nights,        | Sets dark, ominous time.                                                                      | Faithful naturalizes.                                    |
| 154 | Cuando el barrio sosegado        | When the neighborhood is calm    | When the quiet neighborhood      | Sets quiet setting.                                                                           | Faithful shifts order.                                   |
| 155 | No escucha de los galanes        | Hears not from the suitors       | Hears nothing from young lovers  | No romantic activity at night.                                                                | Faithful interprets 'galanes' culturally.                |
| 156 | Ni la música ni el canto;        | Nor music nor singing;           | Nor music nor song;              | Complete silence emphasized.                                                                  | Faithful adapts slightly.                                |
| 157 | Cuando está la calle sola,       | When the street is alone,        | When the street lies empty,      | Emphasizes emptiness.                                                                         | Faithful smooths.                                        |
| 158 | Y el viento corre silbando,      | And the wind runs whistling,     | And the wind whistles by,        | Atmospheric setting.                                                                          | Faithful simplifies action.                              |
| 159 | Y se ocultan las estrellas,      | And the stars hide,              | And the stars are hidden,        | Night fully set.                                                                              | Faithful makes natural.                                  |
| 160 | Y en el triste campanario        | And in the sad bell tower        | And in the sad bell tower        | Mournful setting.                                                                             | Literal and faithful identical.                          |
| 161 | Las lechuzas agoreras            | The ominous owls                 | Ominous owls                     | Omen of death or mystery.                                                                     | Faithful drops article.                                  |
| 162 | Callan, sintiendo azotados       | Are silent, feeling whipped      | Fall silent, sensing blows       | Personification of owls.                                                                      | Faithful adapts for English sense.                       |
| 163 | Por la monótona lluvia           | By the monotonous rain           | By the monotonous rain           | Sound of rain prevailing.                                                                     | Literal and faithful identical.                          |
| 164 | Los negros muros del claustro;   | The black walls of the cloister; | The dark cloister walls;         | Cloister evokes mystery.                                                                      | Faithful smooths 'black'.                                |
| 165 | Entonces, entre el silencio,     | Then, among the silence,         | Then, amidst the silence,        | Quiet broken.                                                                                 | Faithful naturalizes phrase.                             |
| 166 | Se escuchaban unos pasos         | Were heard some footsteps        | Footsteps could be heard         | Intruder or ghostly figure.                                                                   | Faithful shifts for English.                             |
| 167 | Como de alguien que venía        | As if of someone who came        | As if someone were coming        | Builds tension.                                                                               | Faithful uses smoother phrasing.                         |
| 168 | Con misterioso recato;           | With mysterious modesty;         | With mysterious discretion;      | Quiet and secretive.                                                                          | Faithful adjusts for modern English.                     |
| 169 | Y al mismo tiempo la puerta      | And at the same time the door    | And at the same time the door    | Event happening simultaneously.                                                               | Literal and faithful identical.                          |
| 170 | De Luisa, con gran cuidado       | Of Luisa, with great care        | Luisa's door, with great care    | Luisa's role returns.                                                                         | Faithful shifts order naturally.                         |
| 171 | Y poco a poco, se abría,         | And little by little, it opened, | Slowly, it began to open,        | Opening slowly hints at secrecy and suspense.                                                 | Opening slowly hints at secrecy and suspense.            |
| 172 | Y una mujer con un manto         | And a woman with a cloak         | And a woman cloaked in a mantle  | 'Cloak' or 'mantle' signals stealth and hidden identity.                                      | 'Cloak' or 'mantle' signals stealth and hidden identity. |
| 173 | Y poco a poco, se abría,         | And little by little, it opened, | Slowly, it began to open,        | Romantic secret meetings in Catholic cultures often happened near religious images (retablo). | Discreet exit fits tragic romance themes.                |

|     |                                  |                                       |                                      |                                                                       |                                                     |
|-----|----------------------------------|---------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------|
| 174 | Y una mujer con un manto         | And a woman with a cloak              | And a woman cloaked in a mantle      | A 'manto' symbolizes modesty or concealment, common in folklore.      | Religious context adds solemnity.                   |
| 175 | Cubierta, de allí saliendo       | Covered, came out from there          | Emerged quietly from within          | Secret nighttime rendezvous are common motifs in love tragedies.      | Soft lamp light sets a secretive mood.              |
| 176 | Iba hasta al pie del retablo,    | Went up to the foot of the retablo,   | And went to the foot of the retablo, | The retablo refers to a religious icon, a witness to secret vows.     | 'Doncel gallardo' conveys youthful gallantry.       |
| 177 | Do a la luz del farolillo        | Where by the light of the small lamp  | Where, lit by the lantern            | The lantern (farolillo) is iconic in Latin American nocturnal scenes. | Passing time secretly stresses intimacy.            |
| 178 | Estaba un doncel gallardo;       | Stood a handsome young man;           | Stood a gallant young man;           | A 'doncel gallardo' signifies a youthful and ideal lover.             | End of night marks the climax.                      |
| 179 | Y juntos los dos pasaban         | And together they passed              | And together they passed the hours   | Spending hours hidden suggests forbidden love.                        | Dawn threatens to reveal lovers.                    |
| 180 | Las horas, término dando         | The hours, bringing them to an end    | Until the end came                   | Dawn marks endings in tragic love stories.                            | Morning brings gossip and revelation.               |
| 181 | A la cita, antes que el alba     | At the meeting, before dawn           | Meeting before dawn                  | The meeting ends before daylight exposes them.                        | Gossip spreads rapidly among villagers.             |
| 182 | Dejara asomar sus rayos.         | Let its rays appear.                  | Before the first rays broke.         | The rooster signals truth, exposure of secrets.                       | Rooster emphasizes natural timing.                  |
| 183 | Una mañana, la gente             | One morning, the people               | One morning, the townsfolk           | Early risers spread news quickly in small communities.                | Spreading news raises tension.                      |
| 184 | Que madruga con el gallo,        | Who rise with the rooster,            | Up early with the rooster,           | The rooster here symbolizes the start of gossip.                      | Neighbors reinforce credibility through repetition. |
| 185 | Comenzó a dar la noticia         | Began to spread the news              | Began spreading the news             | Word-of-mouth news spread was swift and dramatic.                     | Door-to-door emphasizes local transmission.         |
| 186 | A los vecinos del barrio,        | To the neighbors of the neighborhood, | To the local neighbors,              | Neighborhood networks carry and amplify rumors.                       | Astonishment emphasizes strangeness of events.      |
| 187 | Que a su vez de puerta en puerta | Who in turn from door to door         | Who passed it door to door           | Door-to-door retelling builds suspense and mystery.                   | Luisa's disappearance raises tragic questions.      |
| 188 | Repitieronla asombrados,         | Repeated amazed,                      | Astonished as they told,             | Such repetition increases public fascination.                         | Accident sounds euphemistic, suggests scandal.      |
| 189 | De que Luisa aquella noche,      | That Luisa that night,                | That Luisa that night,               | Luisa becomes the subject of tragic gossip.                           | Open doors imply sudden or planned departure.       |
| 190 | Por un accidente extraño,        | By strange accident,                  | By some strange mishap,              | Accidental disappearances evoke supernatural explanations.            | Open doors signify no force was used.               |
| 191 | Se había perdido, y estaban      | Had disappeared, and were             | Had vanished mysteriously            | Open doors suggest something eerie or shameful.                       | Not robbery shifts narrative to romance.            |
| 192 | Ambas puertas de su cuarto       | Both doors of her room                | With both doors open                 | Both doors open imply deliberate departure.                           | Elopement hinted rather than crime.                 |
| 193 | Abiertas, y dando indicio,       | Open, giving indication,              | Showing no sign of theft,            | No theft suggests love-driven motives.                                | Secret love abduction trope appears.                |
| 194 | No de robo ni de asalto,         | Not of robbery or assault,            | Nor of violent assault,              | Escape in romantic tragedy often replaces crime.                      | News moving fast shows urban dynamics.              |
| 195 | Sino de pensada fuga             | But of premeditated escape            | But rather a planned escape          | Abduction implies secret arrangement in folklore.                     | Rumors grow as story spreads.                       |
| 196 | Y de convenido rapto.            | And of agreed abduction.              | And a secret abduction.              | Mexico City news media sensationalize scandals.                       | Rumors shape public perception.                     |
| 197 | En México la noticia             | In Mexico the news                    | In Mexico the story                  | Speed of news reflects societal hunger for drama.                     | Commentaries imply public obsession.                |
| 198 | Corrió veloz como el rayo,       | Spread like lightning,                | Spread like wildfire,                | Rumors exaggerate personal tragedies.                                 | Idle talk mixes fact and fiction.                   |
| 199 | Dándole más proporciones         | Giving it more proportions            | Exaggerated greatly                  | Common people create layered interpretations.                         | People drawn to scandal sites.                      |
| 200 | Mil diversos comentarios.        | A thousand different comments.        | With endless gossip.                 | Variety of opinions in city folk.                                     | Visitors become passive participants.               |
| 201 | Todos, para no ver nada,         | All, not wanting to see anything,     | Everyone, just to witness,           | Passive viewers drawn to sites of scandal.                            | Scandal becomes local event.                        |
| 202 | Iban siquiera de paso            | Even went just to pass by             | At least passed by                   | Idle curiosity drives even uninvolved visitors.                       | Looking for answers in holy images.                 |

|     |                                |                                      |                                      |                                                                                    |                                                 |
|-----|--------------------------------|--------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|
| 203 | A la mísera calleja            | The miserable alley                  | That miserable alley                 | Poor neighborhoods attract gawkers in tragedies.                                   | Superstition adds mystical element.             |
| 204 | Motivo de tal escándalo.       | Reason for such scandal.             | Scene of the scandal.                | Scandal becomes communal spectacle.                                                | People hope for miraculous signs.               |
| 205 | Quien se acercaba a la puerta, | Who approached the door,             | Those who neared the door,           | Visitors come seeking hidden meanings.                                             | Seeking divine explanation for scandals.        |
| 206 | Quien se fijaba en el santo,   | Who looked at the saint,             | Or stared at the saint,              | Staring at saints for omens is folk tradition.                                     | Looking at saints is a hopeful gesture.         |
| 207 | Para que le diera nuevas       | To see if it gave news               | Hoping for answers                   | Seeking divine explanation for scandals.                                           | Looking at saints is a hopeful gesture.         |
| 208 | Como testigo del caso.         | As a witness to the case.            | As witness to the matter.            | Public gossip and speculation were common.                                         | Lance = incident or event.                      |
| 209 | No faltó quien se atreviera    | There was no lack of someone daring  | There were even those who dared      | Fearless individuals would often speculate.                                        | Atreverse = to dare, in a bold sense.           |
| 210 | A explicar sin gran trabajo    | To explain without much effort       | To explain, without much trouble,    | Gossip was a form of entertainment.                                                | Sin gran trabajo = without much effort.         |
| 211 | El desconocido lance,          | The unknown incident,                | The strange event,                   | Mysterious incidents attracted much talk.                                          | Desconocido = mysterious, unknown.              |
| 212 | Haciéndose en ello práctico.   | Becoming practical at it.            | Becoming experts at it.              | Repeating tales made people feel knowledgeable.                                    | Práctico = skilled through repetition.          |
| 213 | También títulos y nombres      | Also titles and names                | Even titles and names                | Noble titles added intrigue to stories.                                            | Mayorazgos = inherited noble titles.            |
| 214 | De condes y mayorazgos         | Of counts and noble houses           | Of counts and noble estates          | Curiosity spurred widespread rumor.                                                | Curiosos = the inquisitive public.              |
| 215 | En boca de los curiosos        | In the mouths of the curious         | Were whispered among the curious.    | People whispered to avoid consequences.                                            | Por lo bajo = softly, quietly.                  |
| 216 | Se escuchaban por lo bajo.     | Were heard in hushed tones.          | Softly heard, murmuring.             | Soft speaking indicated secrecy.                                                   | Murmuring rather than open talk.                |
| 217 | Y hasta hubo algún atrevido    | And there was even a daring one      | And there was even one bold enough   | Boldness could be dangerous in gossip.                                             | Atrevido = bold or daring.                      |
| 218 | Que, sin mostrar embarazo,     | Who, without showing shame,          | Who, without hesitation,             | Accusing others could bring punishment.                                            | Sin mostrar embarazo = without shame.           |
| 219 | Nombre dijo de culpable        | Named a culprit                      | Accused someone by name,             | Naming someone was serious.                                                        | Nombre de culpable = naming someone.            |
| 220 | Que pudo haberle costado,      | That could have cost him,            | Which could have cost him dearly,    | Severe punishment awaited the reckless.                                            | Pudo haberle costado = risked punishment.       |
| 221 | Ó salir a la picota,           | Either going to the pillory,         | Either to the pillory,               | The pillory was a public humiliation.                                              | Picota = public punishment post.                |
| 222 | O recibir sobre un asno,       | Or riding on a donkey,               | Or riding an ass,                    | Riding a donkey was a disgrace.                                                    | Asno = donkey, disgraceful ride.                |
| 223 | Cuando menos tres arrobos      | At least three arrobos               | At least three arrobos               | 'Arrobos' here means heavy punishment.                                             | Arrobos = figurative for heavy lashes.          |
| 224 | De azotes por temerario.       | Of lashes for being reckless.        | Of lashes for his boldness.          | Lashes were common medieval punishment.                                            | Azotes = lashes or whippings.                   |
| 225 | Al fin, a las malas lenguas    | In the end, to the malicious tongues | In the end, time restrained          | Time often silenced gossip.                                                        | Malas lenguas = malicious gossip.               |
| 226 | Refrenó el tiempo, que plazo   | Time restrained, as the period       | The malicious tongues, whose         | Scandalous tales fade with time.                                                   | Refrenó = restrained or subdued.                |
| 227 | Tienen las murmuraciones       | Belongs to murmurs                   | Murmuring period always comes.       | Gossip is part of human nature.                                                    | Plazo = period or duration.                     |
| 228 | Cual todo lo que es humano.    | As all human things do.              | As with all things human.            | Things return to normalcy.                                                         | Murmuraciones = whispers, gossip.               |
| 229 | En la ciudad, poco a poco,     | In the city, little by little,       | In the city, little by little,       | People moved on from the scandal.                                                  | Cual todo = like all things.                    |
| 230 | La gente se fué olvidando      | People began forgetting              | People forgot                        | Luisa's beauty became a memory.                                                    | Se fue olvidando = gradually forgotten.         |
| 231 | De la hermosura de Luisa,      | Luisa's beauty,                      | Luisa's beauty,                      | The suitor was forgotten.                                                          | Hermosa = beautiful woman.                      |
| 232 | De su galán ignorado,          | Her ignored suitor,                  | Her ignored lover,                   | Songs and serenades faded.                                                         | Galán = suitor or lover.                        |
| 233 | De trovas y serenatas,         | The ballads and serenades,           | Songs and serenades,                 | Violent tales were left behind.                                                    | Trovas = songs or verses.                       |
| 234 | De cuchilladas y rapto.        | The stabbings and abduction.         | The stabbing and abduction.          | The street lost its liveliness.                                                    | Cuchilladas = stabbings.                        |
| 235 | Y volvió la estrecha calle,    | And the narrow street returned,      | And the narrow street returned       | Quietness replaced scandal.                                                        | Estrecha = narrow, familiar street.             |
| 236 | Como en los tiempos de antaño, | Like in times of old,                | Like in olden days,                  | Life returned to routine.                                                          | Antaño = yesteryear, old times.                 |
| 237 | A estar triste y en silencio,  | To being sad and silent,             | To sadness and silence,              | Absence of scandal was noticeable.                                                 | Sin concurrencia = no gatherings.               |
| 238 | Sin concurrencia ni escándalo, | Without gathering or scandal,        | Without scandal or company,          | Nights were quiet and dark.                                                        | Escándalo = scandal or disturbance.             |
| 239 | Y sin más luz en las noches    | And with no more light at night      | And no light at night                | Only a holy symbol remained lit.                                                   | Farolillo = small lantern.                      |
| 240 | Que el farolillo del Santo.    | Than the Saint's little lantern.     | But the little lantern of the Saint. | A poetic reflection begins.                                                        | Dulce = sweet, pleasant.                        |
| 241 | ¡Qué dulce pasa la vida        | How sweet life passes                | How sweetly passes life              | Love provides peace and security.                                                  | Amparo = shelter or protection.                 |
| 242 | Del amor bajo el amparo!       | When love offers its shelter!        | When sheltered by love!              | Poetic summary of peace in love.                                                   | Amparo = protection, often divine or emotional. |
| 243 | ¡Qué ligeros van los días!     | How light the days pass!             | How quickly the days pass!           | Emphasizes the fleeting nature of time, a theme often explored in romantic poetry. | Literal translation matches well.               |
| 244 | ¡Qué fugaces van los años!     | How fleeting the years go!           | How fleeting are the years!          | Expresses the melancholy of passing years.                                         | Literal matches poetic form.                    |
| 245 | Cuéntanse apenas las horas     | The hours are barely counted         | Hours barely seem to count           | Love makes time seem insignificant.                                                | Slightly idiomatic.                             |
| 246 | Cuando faltan los halagos,     | When flattery is lacking,            | When affection is absent,            | Halagos refers to flatteries, also interpreted as expressions of love.             | Halagos means flattering gestures.              |
| 247 | No queriendo detenerlas        | Not wanting to stop them             | Unwilling to halt them               | Desire to avoid reflection on sad or empty moments.                                | Metaphorical expression.                        |

|     |                                 |                                               |                                  |                                                                           |                                                                            |
|-----|---------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------|----------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 248 | Sino acelerar su paso;          | But to hasten their pace;                     | But eager to hasten them;        | Romantic urgency.                                                         | Fairly literal.                                                            |
| 249 | Para el que vive en amores      | For he who lives in love                      | For the one who lives in love    | Lovers live in the moment, ignoring past troubles.                        | No major clarification needed.                                             |
| 250 | Ni hay memoria del pasado,      | There is no memory of the past,               | The past is forgotten,           | The past fades away for those consumed by love.                           | Literal and clear.                                                         |
| 251 | Ni en lo porvenir hay sombras,  | Nor shadows in the future,                    | The future holds no worries,     | The future does not cause anxiety.                                        | Straightforward.                                                           |
| 252 | Ni hay en el presente engaño;   | Nor deception in the present;                 | Nor does the present deceive;    | Love shields from deception.                                              | Straightforward.                                                           |
| 253 | El alma se reconcentra,         | The soul concentrates itself,                 | The soul draws inward,           | Introspective and self-absorbed state of mind.                            | Accurate rendering.                                                        |
| 254 | Y ni el tiempo ni el espacio    | And neither time nor space                    | And neither time nor space       | Romantic idealism transcends time and space.                              | Clear and faithful.                                                        |
| 255 | Tienen más que un solo punto    | Have more than a single point                 | Hold anything but a single point | Love focuses attention on the beloved.                                    | Clear.                                                                     |
| 256 | En el que fija su encanto.      | On which it fixes its charm.                  | Where one's heart is fixed.      | Reference to enchanted fixation.                                          | Interpretative choice.                                                     |
| 257 | Han transcurrido veloces        | Quickly have passed                           | Six swift years have passed      | Marks historical passage in narrative.                                    | Faithful to meaning.                                                       |
| 258 | De nuestra historia seis años,  | Six years of our story,                       | Since our tale began,            | Sets timeline and tension.                                                | Narrative clarification.                                                   |
| 259 | Desde que México supo           | Since Mexico learned                          | Since Mexico knew                | Introduces Mexico's awareness of scandal.                                 | Historical context.                                                        |
| 260 | Que de un amor ignorado,        | That from an unacknowledged love,             | Of an unspoken love,             | Hidden or socially unaccepted love.                                       | Hidden love implied.                                                       |
| 261 | Cediendo sin duda alguna        | Yielding without any doubt                    | Yielding fully and blindly       | Surrender to passion.                                                     | Faithful.                                                                  |
| 262 | A impulso terrible y mágico,    | To a terrible and magical impulse,            | To a terrible and magical force, | Love described as magical and dangerous.                                  | Straightforward.                                                           |
| 263 | La bella Luisa una noche        | The beautiful Luisa one night                 | The lovely Luisa vanished        | Luisa's mysterious disappearance.                                         | Faithful.                                                                  |
| 264 | Desapareció de su barrio.       | Disappeared from her neighborhood.            | From her home one night.         | Neighborhood scandal.                                                     | Clear rendering.                                                           |
| 265 | Mas lo que ninguno supo         | But what no one knew                          | But what none discovered         | Narrative turning point.                                                  | Straightforward.                                                           |
| 266 | Aquí a descubrirlo vamos,       | Here we come to reveal,                       | We now come to reveal,           | Beginning of revelation.                                                  | Narrative clarification.                                                   |
| 267 | Que el tiempo todo descubre,    | For time reveals everything,                  | For time unveils all             | Time as a truth revealer.                                                 | Time metaphor.                                                             |
| 268 | Y él puso el misterio en claro. | And it made the mystery clear.                | And made this clear at last.     | Love story mystery solved.                                                | Faithful and clear.                                                        |
| 269 | Era el amante de Luisa          | He was Luisa's lover                          | Luisa's secret lover was         | Introduction of the lover.                                                | Character introduction.                                                    |
| 270 | Un mancebo muy bizarro,         | A very gallant young man,                     | A bold and noble youth,          | Describes his noble qualities.                                            | Clear rendering.                                                           |
| 271 | Discreto, de nobles prendas,    | Discreet, of noble attributes,                | Discreet and well-bred,          | Social status is emphasized.                                              | Social status emphasized.                                                  |
| 272 | De opulenta casa vástago;       | Offspring of a wealthy house;                 | Born to a wealthy family;        | Family background and wealth.                                             | Family background.                                                         |
| 273 | Con treinta abriles cumplidos;  | With thirty years completed;                  | At thirty years old,             | Age signals maturity.                                                     | Age clarified.                                                             |
| 274 | Gastador, valiente y franco.    | A spendthrift, brave and frank.               | A spender, fearless and open.    | Personal traits - extravagant and bold.                                   | Personality clarified.                                                     |
| 275 | Llamábase el tal mancebo        | The young man's name was                      | He was known as                  | Formal introduction of name.                                              | Title and name.                                                            |
| 276 | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros;      | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros;                    | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros;       | Full noble title.                                                         | Formal name given.                                                         |
| 277 | De estatura corpulenta          | Of corpulent stature                          | Of imposing figure               | Physical description - strong build.                                      | Physical stature described.                                                |
| 278 | Y de grandes ojos garzos.       | And large blue-gray eyes.                     | And striking blue eyes.          | Eye color suggesting attractiveness.                                      | Eye color rendered.                                                        |
| 279 | Precavido en sus intentos       | Cautious in his intentions                    | Cautious in his plans            | Careful and prudent in his actions.                                       | Faithful to meaning.                                                       |
| 280 | Dió cima a su amor bastardo,    | He brought to fruition his illegitimate love, | He fulfilled his illicit love,   | Illegitimate love was socially condemned, often hidden away.              | Bastardo was often used for children born out of wedlock.                  |
| 281 | Escondiendo aquel tesoro        | Hiding that treasure                          | Hiding that precious secret      | The 'treasure' refers to their children, seen as precious yet secret.     | The treasure is metaphorical, referring to their hidden love and children. |
| 282 | De gracia en sitio apartado,    | Of grace in a secluded place,                 | Of grace in a hidden place,      | A hidden place indicates discretion and avoidance of scandal.             | A secluded place to avoid public judgment.                                 |
| 283 | Y allí formó el tierno nido     | And there formed the tender nest              | And made their tender nest there | Forming a nest symbolizes creating a family despite taboo.                | The tender nest refers to family formed outside societal norms.            |
| 284 | Que el mundo buscaba en vano.   | That the world sought in vain.                | That the world vainly sought.    | The world's curiosity is unsatisfied, hinting at social exclusion.        | Luisa's love and children are unseen by society.                           |
| 285 | Luisa fué madre tres veces,     | Luisa became a mother three times,            | Luisa became mother three times, | Having children outside marriage was scandalous yet emotionally profound. | She had multiple children, defying social expectations.                    |
| 286 | Y bajo su dulce amparo          | And under her sweet protection                | And under her gentle shelter     | Her sweet protection shows maternal devotion.                             | Her care sheltered them from stigma.                                       |
| 287 | Crecían aquellos niños          | Those children grew                           | Those children grew up           | Children represented joy amidst societal judgment.                        | Children were her source of happiness.                                     |
| 288 | Siendo su constante halago.     | Being her constant delight.                   | Always her delight and comfort.  | A mother's affection is central in traditional values.                    | Constant halago means they were her joy and purpose.                       |

|     |                                    |                                        |                                   |                                                               |                                                             |
|-----|------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------|
| 289 | Rubios como las espigas            | Blond like the ears of corn            | Fair-haired like the wheat        | Blonde hair was often linked to beauty and innocence.         | Fair-haired suggests idealized beauty.                      |
| 290 | Que el viento mueve en el campo,   | That the wind moves in the field,      | That the wind stirs in the field, | Nature imagery is used to evoke gentleness and purity.        | The wind stirring symbolizes innocence exposed to hardship. |
| 291 | Cuando del sol del otoño           | When the autumn sun                    | When the autumn sun               | Autumn symbolizes maturity and the passage of time.           | Autumn suggests decline and change.                         |
| 292 | Las dora el ardiente rayo;         | Gilds them with its burning rays;      | Paints them with golden light;    | Golden rays represent fleeting happiness.                     | The sun's rays gilding them evokes temporary joy.           |
| 293 | Luisa en el fondo del alma,        | Luisa deep in her soul,                | Luisa deep within her soul,       | Her internal wound signals growing sadness.                   | Luisa's soul bears deep emotional pain.                     |
| 294 | Cual de ponzoñoso dardo,           | Like a poisonous dart,                 | Like a venomous dart,             | The poisonous dart symbolizes emotional pain.                 | Ponzoñoso means poisonous—emotional suffering.              |
| 295 | Iba sintiendo una herida,          | Felt a wound,                          | Felt a wound,                     | Her wound is spiritual, not physical.                         | Her wound was emotional anguish.                            |
| 296 | Que ya tornaba en amargo           | That began to turn bitter              | Turning her peace into sorrow     | Bitterness reflects the decline of happiness.                 | Bitterness shows happiness fading.                          |
| 297 | Su existir antes tranquilo,        | Her once peaceful existence,           | Her once tranquil existence,      | Previously tranquil life turning painful.                     | Tranquility turns to sorrow.                                |
| 298 | Su amor, antes sosegado.           | Her love, once serene.                 | And her once serene love.         | Love turning troubled and unsettled.                          | Serene love becomes complicated.                            |
| 299 | Aquella pasión ardiente,           | That burning passion,                  | That ardent passion,              | Passion once pure, now distressing.                           | Passion turns into a troubling force.                       |
| 300 | Aquel anhelo, aquel ávido          | That yearning, that eager              | That yearning, that eager desire  | Yearning becomes obsessive.                                   | Anhelo and ávido stress growing desperation.                |
| 301 | Empeño con que mostraba            | Effort she showed                      | The persistence she showed        | Persistence now feels burdensome.                             | Her devotion becomes oppressive.                            |
| 302 | Su intenso amor Montes-Claros,     | Her intense love for Montes-Claros,    | In loving Montes-Claros,          | Love becomes demanding and fraught.                           | Montes-Claros becomes a source of turmoil.                  |
| 303 | Poco a poco, sin que Luisa         | Little by little, without Luisa        | Slowly, though Luisa              | Changes are happening unnoticed by Luisa.                     | Luisa is unaware of the growing rift.                       |
| 304 | Diera lugar a tal cambio,          | Allowing for such a change,            | Did not invite such change,       | Even Don Nuño is perplexed.                                   | Change occurs subtly and painfully.                         |
| 305 | Sin que tampoco don Nuño           | Without even Don Nuño                  | Nor Don Nuño either               | Love shifts into alienation.                                  | Don Nuño himself is confused.                               |
| 306 | Lograr pudiera explicarlo,         | Being able to explain it,              | Could explain it,                 | Habitual visits ceased, signifying withdrawal.                | The relationship declines into alienation.                  |
| 307 | Tornándose fué en desvío           | It turned into deviation               | It became estrangement            | Routine is broken by estrangement.                            | Habit gives way to emotional distance.                      |
| 308 | De tal suerte, que hasta el hábito | To such an extent, that even the habit | To the point that even the custom | He lets go of daily presence.                                 | Absence replaces intimacy.                                  |
| 309 | De verla todos los días            | Of seeing her every day                | Of seeing her daily               | Indifference sets in.                                         | He distances himself more and more.                         |
| 310 | Vino a perder, y dejando           | He lost, and leaving                   | He abandoned, letting             | He returns briefly but disconnected.                          | Visits become infrequent and careless.                      |
| 311 | Correr hasta una semana,           | To run a whole week,                   | Days pass without visiting,       | No concern for Luisa's suffering.                             | Luisa's suffering is overlooked.                            |
| 312 | Llegaba, y al breve rato           | He came, and shortly after             | He came and left quickly          | Her grievance is disregarded.                                 | Luisa remains silent in pain.                               |
| 313 | Volvió a salir, sin cuidarse       | He left again, without caring          | Without concern,                  | Luisa suffers quietly and alone.                              | Hidden tears emphasize unspoken despair.                    |
| 314 | De la herida del agravio           | About the wound of grievance           | For the wound of grievance        | Her hidden tears reflect silent sorrow.                       | Her tears are a silent expression of heartbreak.            |
| 315 | Que Luisa, humilde, callaba        | That Luisa, humble, kept silent        | That humble Luisa bore            | Her concealed sorrow highlights the depth of her suffering.   | Hidden crying reinforces her isolated grief.                |
| 316 | Vertiendo oculto su llanto.        | Pouring hidden her weeping.            | She shed her tears in secret.     | Private weeping was often seen as virtuous and modest.        | Line about hidden grief.                                    |
| 317 | Una noche en que la luna           | One night when the moon                | One night when the moon           | The moon often symbolizes quietude or fate in Spanish poetry. | Introduces peaceful night scene.                            |
| 318 | Iba serena alumbrando;             | Went serenely lighting;                | Was shining serenely,             | Peaceful moonlight sets a gentle and expectant scene.         | Describes serene moonlight.                                 |
| 319 | Cuando el toque de la queda        | When the curfew bell                   | As the curfew bell                | Curfew bells marked evening silence in colonial cities.       | Signals quiet of curfew time.                               |
| 320 | Vibra en el campanario;            | Vibrated in the bell tower;            | Rang in the tower,                | Bell towers were central in city life for timekeeping.        | Bell as signal to retire.                                   |
| 321 | En su tranquilo aposento,          | In her tranquil room,                  | In her quiet chamber,             | A woman's bedroom often portrayed as a safe, private space.   | Setting of domestic tranquility.                            |

|     |                                 |                                              |                                                 |                                                                   |                                                                      |
|-----|---------------------------------|----------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 322 | Dulcemente iluminado            | Gently illuminated                           | Softly lit                                      | Warm candlelight or moonlight evokes domestic tranquility.        | Gentle illumination.                                                 |
| 323 | Por el fulgor apacible          | By the peaceful glow                         | By gentle radiance                              | The glow suggests both comfort and emotional stillness.           | Peaceful nighttime radiance.                                         |
| 324 | Que inunda todo el espacio;     | That floods all the space;                   | That filled all the space,                      | Poetic convention to describe pervasive night calm.               | Space filled with calm light.                                        |
| 325 | Junto a la abierta ventana      | Next to the open window                      | Next to the open window                         | Windows symbolize openings to the world and fate.                 | She sits by an open window.                                          |
| 326 | Y con un niño en los brazos,    | And with a child in her arms,                | Holding a child in her arms,                    | Holding a child implies maternal tenderness and duty.             | Luisa holds her child.                                               |
| 327 | Con la mirada perdida           | With her gaze lost                           | With her gaze distant                           | Lost gaze indicates deep sorrow and distraction.                  | She looks distantly, distracted.                                     |
| 328 | En el horizonte vago,           | On the vague horizon,                        | Toward the hazy horizon,                        | The horizon represents distant dreams or unreachable peace.       | Vision extends to vague horizon.                                     |
| 329 | Donde apenas se dibuja          | Where hardly is outlined                     | Where barely formed                             | Bare outlines signify the vagueness of hope or clarity.           | Barely visible shapes.                                               |
| 330 | El gigantesco sudario           | The gigantic shroud                          | The massive shroud                              | Shroud implies death and inevitable sorrow.                       | Imagery of snow shroud.                                              |
| 331 | De nieve, que a los volcanes    | Of snow, that to the volcanoes               | Of snow that to the volcanoes                   | Volcanoes are Mexico's iconic landmarks.                          | Snow mantles volcanoes eternally.                                    |
| 332 | Les sirve de eterno manto,      | Serves as an eternal cloak,                  | Served as an eternal cloak,                     | Snow-capped volcanoes symbolize eternity and cold indifference.   | Volcanoes wear snow eternally.                                       |
| 333 | Está la amante Luisa,           | There is the lover Luisa,                    | There sat loving Luisa,                         | Luisa is the suffering lover archetype.                           | Luisa in sorrowful pose.                                             |
| 334 | Y por su semblante pálido       | And on her pale face                         | And upon her pale face                          | Pale face signifies sadness or despair.                           | Pale face shows sadness.                                             |
| 335 | Resbala un rayo de luna         | Slides a ray of moon                         | Slid a moonbeam                                 | Moon rays touching suggest heavenly sympathy.                     | Moonbeam touches tear-streaked face.                                 |
| 336 | Que, en sus lágrimas brillando, | That, in her tears shining,                  | That, glowing in her tears,                     | Tears mingling with moonlight suggests sorrow consecrated.        | Moonlight mingles with tears.                                        |
| 337 | Con ellas baja hasta el rostro  | With them goes down to the face              | Fell upon the face                              | The child symbolizes innocence unaffected by tragedy.             | Tears descend to child.                                              |
| 338 | Del niño, que en el regazo      | Of the child, who in the lap                 | Of the child in her lap                         | Cradling implies protective but helpless maternal love.           | Child in lap, asleep.                                                |
| 339 | Maternal duerme, y no siente    | Motherly sleeps, and does not feel           | Sleeping soundly, unaware                       | The child does not perceive the tragedy.                          | Child unaware of mother's sadness.                                   |
| 340 | La amarga lluvia de llanto.     | The bitter rain of weeping.                  | Of his mother's bitter tears.                   | Rain metaphorically represents sorrow.                            | Mother cries quietly.                                                |
| 341 | Así transcurre una hora;        | Thus passes an hour;                         | An hour passed;                                 | Time passes slowly in grief.                                      | An hour of grief.                                                    |
| 342 | La madre sigue llorando;        | The mother continues crying;                 | Still the mother wept;                          | Her sorrow is continuous.                                         | She continues to cry.                                                |
| 343 | Del niño apenas se escucha      | Of the child barely is heard                 | The child's soft breathing                      | Child's peacefulness contrasts mother's anguish.                  | Child breathing quietly.                                             |
| 344 | El respirar sosegado;           | The calm breathing;                          | Was scarcely heard;                             | Stillness emphasizes the tension before action.                   | Sudden shift in time.                                                |
| 345 | Mas, de repente, las once       | But, suddenly, eleven                        | But suddenly, at eleven,                        | The sudden striking of eleven indicates the witching hour.        | Clock strikes eleven.                                                |
| 346 | Se oyen sonar, y con rápido     | Are heard to strike, and with quick          | The bells chimed and quickly                    | Late night symbolizes danger and decision.                        | Luisa startled to action.                                            |
| 347 | Movimiento se alza Luisa;       | Movement Luisa rises;                        | Luisa rose in haste;                            | Luisa suddenly rises showing urgency.                             | She leaves child suddenly.                                           |
| 348 | Deja con gran sobresalto        | She leaves with great fright                 | Leaving in alarm                                | Leaving child alone implies coming tragedy.                       | Wraps herself quickly.                                               |
| 349 | En su cuna al niño, y luego     | In his cradle the child, and then            | The child in his cradle, and then               | Black shawls signify mourning or misfortune.                      | Black shawl symbolic of fate.                                        |
| 350 | En negro mantón de paño         | In a black woolen shawl                      | In a black wool shawl                           | Black shawls symbolize mourning or fateful departure.             | Luisa prepares to leave in mourning.                                 |
| 351 | Se envuelve y sale a la calle;  | She wraps herself and goes out to the street | She wraps herself and heads out into the street | Wrapping up indicates urgency and preparation for night or danger | "Se envuelve" -> "wraps herself" shows hurried, purposeful departure |
| 352 | Y sin detener su paso           | And without stopping her step                | Without slowing, she goes straight              | Public festivities were common at elite weddings                  | She does not pause; she continues quickly.                           |

|     |                                  |                                       |                                     |                                                                |                                                                                 |
|-----|----------------------------------|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 353 | Llega frente de la casa          | She arrives in front of the house     | Arriving before the house           | Front of house symbolized public-private division              | In front of his home, where he lives.                                           |
| 354 | Donde vive Montes-Claros;        | Where Montes-Claros lives;            | Where Montes-Claros resides;        | Montes-Claros suggests nobility or high class                  | Reference to the man who recently married.                                      |
| 355 | Mira que por los balcones        | She sees that through the balconies   | She sees from the balconies         | Balconies as social spaces in Mexican houses                   | Visual cue of people watching from balconies.                                   |
| 356 | Un torrente desbordado           | A torrential flood                    | A flood of light and sound          | Flood of light symbolizes opulence                             | Joy and celebration radiating outward.                                          |
| 357 | Sale de luz, y se escucha        | Bursts forth with light, and is heard | Pouring out and filling the air     | Dance and music mark joyful aristocratic events                | Music and voices fill the environment.                                          |
| 358 | La música de un sarao;           | The music of a dance party;           | The lively music of a ball;         | Sarao: elegant social dance gathering                          | A fancy upper-class dance party.                                                |
| 359 | Ve que se cruzan mil sombras,    | She sees a thousand shadows crossing, | She sees the dancing shadows,       | Shadows and movement imply festivity                           | Many people moving in celebration.                                              |
| 360 | Y oye ese murmullo vario         | And hears that varied murmur          | And hears the mingling voices       | Murmur indicates lively conversation                           | A blend of voices, hard to distinguish.                                         |
| 361 | Que denuncia el regocijo         | Which betrays the rejoicing           | That reveal a celebration           | Joy often expressed with music and noise                       | The joy and cheer are unmistakable.                                             |
| 362 | Con frases, músicas, cantos,     | With phrases, music, songs,           | With songs, music and cheer,        | Social rituals common in upper class                           | Various expressions of happiness.                                               |
| 363 | Movimientos de parejas,          | Movements of couples,                 | Couples dancing gracefully,         | Dance and partners as courtship tradition                      | Couples dance as part of social festivities.                                    |
| 364 | Risas y chocar de vasos;         | Laughter and clinking of glasses;     | Laughter and clinking glasses;      | Clinking glasses: part of social rituals                       | Toasting and drinking as part of the joy.                                       |
| 365 | Todo interrumpiendo a veces      | All interrupted at times              | Interrupted sometimes               | Festivities were lively but punctuated                         | Sometimes interrupted by other noises.                                          |
| 366 | Nutridas salvas de aplausos.     | By nourished rounds of applause.      | By loud bursts of applause.         | Applause reflects social performance                           | Clapping to encourage performers or dancers.                                    |
| 367 | Extática queda Luisa             | Luisa remains ecstatic                | Luisa stands in awe                 | Awe of Luisa marks contrast of joy/grief                       | Luisa is overwhelmed and shocked.                                               |
| 368 | Y duda si está soñando;          | And doubts if she is dreaming;        | Wondering if she is dreaming;       | Dreamlike disbelief highlights betrayal                        | She questions the joyful sounds around.                                         |
| 369 | ¿Por qué tan alegre goza         | Why is the master so joyful           | Why such happiness here             | Contrast between celebration and sorrow                        | She cannot understand the contrast.                                             |
| 370 | Quien la deja hundida en llanto? | When he left her sunk in tears?       | When she is drowning in tears?      | Luisa still grieving amidst revelry                            | Her grief makes the celebration painful.                                        |
| 371 | Cobra valor, se aproxima         | She gathers courage, approaches       | She bravely moves forward           | Approaching the house is bold                                  | She bravely approaches despite pain.                                            |
| 372 | A la casa, y de un lacayo,       | The house, and from a servant,        | To the house, asking a servant,     | Servants were key informants                                   | The servant is the messenger here.                                              |
| 373 | De los cien que entran y salen,  | From the hundred coming and going,    | Amongst those entering and leaving, | High volume of guests typical                                  | Many guests reflect a big wedding.                                              |
| 374 | Resuelta detiene el paso.        | She firmly halts him.                 | She firmly stops him.               | Stopping a servant: dramatic tension                           | She needs to find out what's happening.                                         |
| 375 | —¿Queréis decir, le pregunta,    | —Do you mean, she asks him,           | —Tell me, she asks,                 | Direct inquiry is socially risky                               | Direct questioning shows her urgency.                                           |
| 376 | Por qué tiene fiesta el amo?     | Why the master celebrates?            | Why the master celebrates?          | Celebration for marriage (sarcastic response)                  | She is surprised by the public joy.                                             |
| 377 | —¡Calle! le responde el otro,    | —Silence! he answers her,             | —Silence! he quickly says,          | "Silence!" shows class barriers                                | Dismissive response from servant.                                               |
| 378 | De esta pregunta me pismo;       | That question astonishes me;          | I'm surprised you don't know;       | Marriage widely known, public event                            | The news is common knowledge.                                                   |
| 379 | ¿Quién en la ciudad ignora       | Who in the city does not know         | All the city knows already          | Citywide awareness of elite weddings                           | Public knowledge in elite society.                                              |
| 380 | Que, con inmenso boato,          | That, with immense pomp,              | That with great pomp                | Pomp indicates social prestige                                 | Lavish weddings were grand affairs.                                             |
| 381 | Ésta mañana a las nueve,         | This morning at nine,                 | This very morning at nine,          | Morning weddings: social norm                                  | Morning weddings signify respectability.                                        |
| 382 | En la iglesia del Sagrario,      | In the church of the Sanctuary,       | In the Sanctuary Church,            | Sagrario church: important religious site                      | The Sanctuary is prestigious for ceremonies.                                    |
| 383 | Celebró su matrimonio            | He celebrated his marriage            | He was married today                | Marriage marks social ascent                                   | Marriage symbolizes betrayal to Luisa.                                          |
| 384 | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros?       | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros?            | To Don Nuño of Montes-Claros.       | Montes-Claros name repeated for emphasis                       | Montes-Claros' social status emphasized.                                        |
| 385 | ¡Vaya que estás atrasada         | You are truly late                    | You're far behind the news          | "You're late" conveys exclusion from elite news                | The servant mocks her ignorance.                                                |
| 386 | De noticias... nos miramos!      | With the news... we all know!         | That's old news already!            | Social exclusion and isolation theme                           | Luisa feels excluded and humiliated.                                            |
| 387 | Se marchó aquel hombre,          | That man went away,                   | The man left,                       | Abrupt departure shows news delivery was casual to him.        | "Se marchó" → "left" keeps tone neutral and factual.                            |
| 388 | y Luisa Quedóse como de mármol;  | and Luisa remained like marble;       | and Luisa stood frozen as marble;   | Marble symbolizes shock, immobility, and grief.                | "Quedóse como de mármol" → "stood frozen as marble" conveys figurative meaning. |
| 389 | Ni una lágrima en los ojos,      | Not a tear in the eyes,               | No tears were in her eyes,          | Her stoic restraint reflects cultural ideas of tragic dignity. | Her tears are suppressed—emotion internalized.                                  |
| 390 | Ni un gemido entre los labios,   | Nor a groan between the lips,         | Nor did a groan pass her lips,      | Groans or tears would signal weakness—her silence is powerful. | No audible sorrow shown.                                                        |
| 391 | Y así, yerta, muda, inmóvil,     | And thus, rigid, mute, immobile,      | Rigid, mute, unmoving,              | Stillness emphasizes intense grief and resolve.                | Frozen in grief.                                                                |

|     |                                |                                       |                                            |                                                            |                                                            |
|-----|--------------------------------|---------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| 392 | Estuvo en pie largo rato;      | She stood for a long while;           | She stood for a long time;                 | Frozen, she wrestles with shock and grief.                 | She stood there immobile.                                  |
| 393 | Después se acercó a la puerta, | Then she approached the door,         | Then she went to the door,                 | She moves deliberately, signifying determination.          | She decided to face them.                                  |
| 394 | Y entre la gente del patio     | And among the people of the courtyard | And mingling among those in the courtyard, | The courtyard was a social space—she must blend in.        | Entered the common area unnoticed.                         |
| 395 | Se deslizó como sombra         | She slipped like a shadow             | She slipped through like a shadow          | Moving like a shadow is both literal and poetic.           | Slipped in unnoticed.                                      |
| 396 | A la escalera llegando.        | Arriving at the staircase.            | Until she reached the stairs.              | Stairs symbolically mark her rising towards confrontation. | Moved stealthily to the stairs.                            |
| 397 | Subió por ella de prisa        | She hurried up it                     | She hurried up quickly                     | Her haste reflects inner turmoil.                          | Rushed upwards.                                            |
| 398 | Uno tras otro peldaño;         | Step by step;                         | Step after step;                           | The steps symbolize ascent towards fate.                   | Climbed quickly.                                           |
| 399 | Siguió erguida y misteriosa    | She remained upright and mysterious   | Upright and mysterious still,              | She maintains composure but is deeply disturbed.           | Determined yet mysterious.                                 |
| 400 | Por el corredor más amplio,    | Through the wider corridor,           | She went through the wide corridor,        | The wider space contrasts with her narrow path.            | Passed into a broader space.                               |
| 401 | No sin que a muchos llamara    | Not without drawing attention         | Not without many noticing                  | Public attention hints at scandal or tragedy.              | People noticed her presence.                               |
| 402 | La atención su porte extraño;  | Her strange bearing called many       | Her strange and striking presence,         | Her presence disrupts the normal social order.             | Striking presence drew attention.                          |
| 403 | Y en la puerta de la sala,     | And at the hall's door,               | At the door of the hall,                   | Thresholds often mark climactic moments.                   | She reached the hall door.                                 |
| 404 | Del cortinaje de raso,         | Behind the satin curtain,             | Behind the satin curtain,                  | Satin curtains suggest wealth and secrecy.                 | Hid behind the curtain.                                    |
| 405 | Oculto tras de los pliegues,   | Hidden behind its folds,              | Concealed among its folds,                 | Hiding herself intensifies the voyeuristic tension.        | Peeking secretly.                                          |
| 406 | Miró con asombro y pasmo       | She looked with astonishment and awe  | She watched in amazement and awe           | Witnessing betrayal adds personal pain.                    | Shocked at what she saw.                                   |
| 407 | A don Nuño y a su dama         | At Don Nuño and his lady              | Don Nuño and his lady                      | Nuño and his new love are celebrated publicly.             | Saw Don Nuño and his new lover.                            |
| 408 | En un riquísimo estrado,       | On a very luxurious platform,         | Seated upon a rich platform,               | Estrado signifies status and privilege.                    | They sat on an elegant platform.                           |
| 409 | Hablando amorosamente          | Speaking lovingly                     | Speaking tenderly                          | Sweet talk contrasts Luisa's sorrow.                       | Spoke intimately.                                          |
| 410 | Y entrelazadas sus manos,      | And with hands intertwined,           | Their hands entwined,                      | Their hands mirror Luisa and Nuño's past intimacy.         | Their hands were intertwined.                              |
| 411 | Como las manos de Luisa        | Like Luisa's hands                    | Like Luisa and Nuño's long ago,            | Painful reminder of lost love.                             | Echo of past love.                                         |
| 412 | Y las de Nuño otros años,      | And Nuño's years before,              | Joined in passion again,                   | Years later, passions reawaken.                            | They were lovers again.                                    |
| 413 | Entre ardientes juramentos,    | Amid burning oaths,                   | With burning oaths,                        | Old vows now broken yet haunting.                          | Oaths once given, renewed.                                 |
| 414 | Convulsivas se enlazaron,      | They clasped convulsively,            | They gripped each other convulsively,      | Their union is dramatic and painful to see.                | Held hands tightly.                                        |
| 415 | Allá en la callada noche,      | There in the quiet night,             | In the stillness of night,                 | Silent nights contrast with internal conflict.             | Silent and still night.                                    |
| 416 | En la calleja del barrio,      | In the alleyway of the neighborhood,  | In the silent alley,                       | Night and alley add secrecy and tragedy.                   | Quiet neighborhood.                                        |
| 417 | Sin más luz que el farolillo,  | With no light but the small lamp,     | Only the small lantern lit them,           | Single light suggests loneliness and exposure.             | Only the lamp was lit.                                     |
| 418 | Ni más testigo que el Santo.   | Nor witness but the Saint.            | And no other witness but the Saint.        | Invoking the Saint as the only witness.                    | Only the Saint saw them.                                   |
| 419 | Airada, inflexible, fiera,     | Angry, inflexible, fierce,            | Angry, inflexible, fierce,                 | Her fury marks a transformation.                           | Luisa turns furious.                                       |
| 420 | Volvió Luisa sin reparo        | Luisa returned without hesitation     | Luisa went back without pause              | She returns ready to act, driven by rage.                  | She quickly left to act.                                   |
| 421 | A verse sola en la calle,      | To find herself alone in the street,  | Finding herself alone in the street,       | Streets symbolically empty her sense of abandonment.       | Loneliness in the street symbolizes despair and isolation. |
| 422 | Y veloz, como del arco         | And swiftly, like from the bow        | And swiftly, like an arrow                 | Speed compared to an arrow marks fatal determination.      | Arrow metaphor used to convey deadly haste.                |
| 423 | Parte la flecha, del sitio     | The arrow flies, from the place       | She sped from that place                   | Arrow metaphor conveys both violence and direction.        | Departure marks the turning point to action.               |
| 424 | Se aleja, y en breve espacio   | She leaves, and in a short while      | She left quickly, and soon                 | She departs hastily, driven by emotional turmoil.          | Quick departure shows she's consumed by emotions.          |
| 425 | Llega adonde no se escuchan    | She arrives where no sounds are heard | Arrived where no music reached             | She seeks isolation as her anguish grows.                  | Silent place implies isolation from society.               |
| 426 | Los rumores del sarao;         | Of the party's rumors;                | The distant sounds of revelry;             | Absence of festive noise emphasizes her detachment.        | Party sounds symbolize life she has abandoned.             |
| 427 | Y sin embargo, en su oído      | And yet, in her ear                   | Yet in her ears                            | Despite silence, inner torment echoes in her mind.         | Inner voices still haunt her despite silence.              |

|     |                                |                                       |                                   |                                                                |                                                                            |
|-----|--------------------------------|---------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 428 | Van distintos resonando,       | They keep resonating differently,     | The echoes still resounded,       | Memories and guilt resonate more loudly now.                   | Resonance indicates her mental state and guilt.                            |
| 429 | Y delante de sus ojos          | And before her eyes                   | And before her eyes               | Her vision blurs reality with emotional imagery.               | Imagery shows confusion between memory and present.                        |
| 430 | Contempla vivo aquel cuadro.   | She sees that vivid scene.            | A vivid memory arose.             | The vivid scene symbolizes traumatic recollection.             | Memory overtakes her reason at this stage.                                 |
| 431 | Camina y llega a la casa,      | She walks and reaches the house,      | She reached her house,            | Returning home signifies confrontation with destiny.           | Homecoming foreshadows confrontation and tragedy.                          |
| 432 | Se acerca al antiguo armario,  | She approaches the old cupboard,      | Went straight to the old cabinet, | The cabinet represents hidden or repressed thoughts.           | The cabinet acts as a symbol of the past.                                  |
| 433 | Abre un cajón y en él busca    | Opens a drawer and searches inside    | Opened a drawer and searched      | Opening drawers symbolizes unveiling buried emotions.          | Opening drawers is a metaphor for uncovering repressed memories.           |
| 434 | Y halla un puñal que olvidado  | And finds a dagger that was forgotten | And found a dagger forgotten      | Forgotten dagger implies premeditation or fatal opportunity.   | The dagger links past betrayal and current violence.                       |
| 435 | Dejó allí Nuño una noche;      | There by Nuño one night;              | By Nuño long ago;                 | Nuño's role lingers even in absence, intensifying drama.       | Nuño's forgotten object brings fatal consequences.                         |
| 436 | Lo empuña, cruza un relámpago  | She grabs it, a lightning flash       | She grasped it, with a flash      | Seizing the dagger triggers a rapid descent.                   | Flash signifies a sudden, violent decision.                                |
| 437 | Espantoso por sus ojos;        | Horrible to her eyes;                 | Terrifying to behold;             | Visual horror reflects her psychological breakdown.            | Eyes reveal her madness through terror.                                    |
| 438 | Corre al lecho en que soñando  | She runs to the bed where dreaming    | She rushed to the bedroom where   | Running to her children shows tragic maternal instinct.        | Her instinct directs her to her innocent children.                         |
| 439 | Están sus hijos, y, loca,      | Are her children, and, mad,           | Her children slept peacefully,    | Children still represent innocence, contrasted by her madness. | Her madness overtakes maternal instinct, turning deadly.                   |
| 440 | Arranca con fiera mano         | With a fierce hand she grabs          | And seized with madness,          | Killing them marks the climactic tragic fall.                  | Murder as tragic culmination of her despair.                               |
| 441 | La vida a los tres, y corre,   | The life of all three, and runs,      | She killed all three, then fled,  | Blood-soaked cloak is symbolic of irreversible guilt.          | Cloak and blood symbolize her irreversible fall.                           |
| 442 | Cubierto de sangre el manto,   | Covered in blood the cloak,           | Her cloak soaked in blood,        | Empty streets echo her solitude and remorse.                   | City's silence mirrors her moral and emotional emptiness.                  |
| 443 | Por la ciudad silenciosa       | Through the silent city               | Through the silent streets        | Howls represent primal grief and supernatural transformation.  | Howling evokes transformation into the mythic 'Llorona'.                   |
| 444 | Hondos aullidos lanzando.      | Hurling deep howls.                   | Uttering deep howls.              | Howls represent primal grief and ghostly transformation.       | "Lanzando" literally "hurling" softened to "uttering" for natural English. |
| 445 | Presurosa va la gente          | Hurriedly goes the people             | The crowd moves quickly           | The crowd eager for public punishment.                         | Literal 'hurried' fits; 'moves quickly' smooths for English.               |
| 446 | A ver el triste espectáculo    | To see the sad spectacle              | To see the sorrowful spectacle    | Public executions were social spectacles.                      | 'Spectacle' retains cultural idea of viewing public punishment.            |
| 447 | Que le ofrece la justicia,     | That justice offers them,             | That justice has prepared,        | Justice is personified as offering punishment.                 | 'Offers' adjusted for English clarity.                                     |
| 448 | Que a garrote ha condenado     | That to the garrote has condemned     | Which condemned to the garrote    | Garrote was a common execution method.                         | 'Condemned' is judicial term.                                              |
| 449 | A una mujer que dió muerte     | A woman who killed                    | A woman who murdered              | Infanticide seen as ultimate crime.                            | 'Gave death' -> 'murdered' in English.                                     |
| 450 | A sus tres hijos, y el caso,   | Her three children, and the case      | Her three children, and thus      | Public reaction mixes scandal with horror.                     | Simplified phrase for natural reading.                                     |
| 451 | Como es natural, produjo       | As is natural, produced               | Naturally caused                  | Natural outrage expected in this context.                      | 'Produced scandal' -> 'caused scandal' natural in English.                 |
| 452 | En el pueblo gran escándalo.   | A great scandal in the town.          | Great scandal in the town.        | Townpeople viewed executions as public duty.                   | Smooths for clarity.                                                       |
| 453 | Desde que lució la aurora,     | Since dawn broke,                     | Since dawn broke,                 | Early attendance shows eagerness.                              | 'Dawn broke' is idiomatic.                                                 |
| 454 | La plazuela en que el cadalso  | The square where the scaffold         | The square with the scaffold      | Scaffold as focal point.                                       | 'Scaffold' retained for accuracy.                                          |
| 455 | Se levantó, estaba llena       | Was raised, was filled                | Had filled up                     | Crowds common at public executions.                            | 'Was filled' clearer in English.                                           |
| 456 | De gente del populacho,        | With people from the populace,        | With the town's people,           | The masses as a narrative element.                             | Natural phrasing of 'town's people'.                                       |
| 457 | Que allí aguardaba el instante | Who awaited the moment                | Awaiting the moment               | Publicly witnessing justice was expected.                      | 'Awaiting' reads naturally.                                                |
| 458 | De ver consumarse el acto,     | To see the act consummated,           | When the act would be done.       | Anticipation of punishment.                                    | 'Consummated' -> 'done' simpler.                                           |
| 459 | Ni recogida ni triste          | Neither withdrawn nor sad             | Not quiet nor sorrowful           | Absence of sorrow reflects public scorn.                       | 'Withdrawn' -> 'quiet' for naturalness.                                    |
| 460 | Sino bulliciosa, y dando       | But boisterous, and showing           | But noisy, showing                | Crowd lacks pity or empathy.                                   | 'Boisterous' adjusted to 'noisy'.                                          |

|     |                                |                                     |                                     |                                                  |                                                        |
|-----|--------------------------------|-------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------|
| 461 | Pruebas de que no le impone    | Proof that no fear imposed          | No fear or pity                     | Public spectacle outweighs compassion.           | 'Impose fear' -> 'no fear or pity'.                    |
| 462 | Temor suplicio tan bárbaro.    | Terror of such barbaric punishment. | For such cruel punishment.          | No horror at punishment.                         | 'Barbaric punishment' retained.                        |
| 463 | Ya comienza a impacientarse    | The crowd grows impatient           | The crowd grows restless            | Public grows restless awaiting climax.           | 'Grows impatient' -> 'grows restless'.                 |
| 464 | La muchedumbre, que en mayo    | In May, when                        | In May's burning heat,              | Heat adds to tension.                            | 'In May' -> 'May's burning heat'.                      |
| 465 | Los rayos del sol abrasan,     | The sun's rays scorch,              | The sun blazing down,               | Sun heightens intensity of scene.                | 'Abrasive' -> 'blazing down'.                          |
| 466 | Y están las doce sonando;      | And twelve is striking;             | As noon bells ring;                 | Noon suggests peak moment.                       | 'Noon bells' clearer in English.                       |
| 467 | Y no obstante, nadie piensa    | Yet no one thinks                   | Yet none leave                      | Morbid fascination overrides discomfort.         | 'No one thinks' -> 'None leave'.                       |
| 468 | En retirarse, que hay ánimo    | Of leaving, for there is desire     | All eager to watch                  | Fascination with violent punishment.             | 'Desire to watch' clearer.                             |
| 469 | De contemplar cómo espira      | To watch how expires                | How the condemned would die,        | Desire to see death.                             | 'How expires' -> 'how condemned would die'.            |
| 470 | Un tigre con rostro humano.    | A tiger with human face.            | A fierce woman, monstrous.          | Dehumanization of Luisa.                         | 'Tiger face' -> 'fierce woman'.                        |
| 471 | Es en las madres más vivo      | In mothers it is more vivid         | Among the mothers, fiercer still    | Mothers especially harsh in judgment.            | 'Mothers more vivid' -> 'Among mothers, fiercer'.      |
| 472 | Aquel empeño, y más franco     | That zeal, and more frank           | Is anger and disgust                | Violation of motherhood's sanctity.              | 'Frank' -> 'disgust'.                                  |
| 473 | Su enojo contra la madre       | Their anger at the mother           | At the woman                        | Maternal betrayal amplified.                     | 'Unworthy of sweet task' -> 'unworthy of motherhood'.  |
| 474 | Indigna del dulce encargo.     | Unworthy of her sweet task.         | Unworthy of motherhood.             | Bell signals impending death.                    | 'Campanilla' -> 'small bell'.                          |
| 475 | Por fin de una campanilla      | At last from a small bell           | Finally a small bell rings          | Sound heightens suspense.                        | 'Nearby sound' -> 'drawing near'.                      |
| 476 | Se oye el sonido cercano;      | The sound is heard nearby;          | The sound drawing near;             | Crowd drawn tighter.                             | 'Cluster' -> 'surge'.                                  |
| 477 | La gente se arremolina,        | The people cluster,                 | The people surge                    | Procession as narrative climax.                  | 'Crossing' -> 'part'.                                  |
| 478 | Y en medio de ella cruzando    | And crossing among them             | And part for the procession         | Luisa paraded to death.                          | 'Gloomy' -> 'dark'.                                    |
| 479 | Pasa el lúgubre cortejo        | Passes the gloomy procession        | That takes Luisa to die.            | Dark procession imagery.                         | 'Carries to scaffold' -> 'takes Luisa to die'.         |
| 480 | Que lleva a Luisa al cadalso.  | That carries Luisa to the scaffold. | Her hair wild,                      | Disheveled state shows degradation.              | 'Disheveled hair' -> 'wild hair'.                      |
| 481 | Los cabellos en desorden,      | Hair disheveled,                    | Her face twisted,                   | Physical deterioration signifies downfall.       | 'Distorted face' -> 'twisted'.                         |
| 482 | El rostro desencajado,         | Face distorted,                     | Across her bare chest               | Bare chest suggests shame.                       | 'Bare chest' accurate.                                 |
| 483 | Y sobre el desnudo pecho       | And on her bare chest               | Relics and scapulars hang,          | Relics imply repentance.                         | 'Relics and scapulars' retained.                       |
| 484 | Reliquias y escapularios,      | Relics and scapulars,               | She walks heavily,                  | Heavy step symbolizes doom.                      | 'Walks painfully' -> 'walks heavily'.                  |
| 485 | Camina penosamente,            | She walks painfully,                | Led by two brothers                 | Holy brotherhood aids condemned.                 | 'Led by brothers' clear.                               |
| 486 | Llevada por dos hermanos       | Led by two brothers                 | Of a sacred brotherhood,            | Execution rituals guided by church.              | 'Holy brotherhood' clearer.                            |
| 487 | De una santa cofradía,         | Of a holy brotherhood,              | Aiding the condemned.               | Confraternity role was common.                   | 'Confraternity' -> 'sacred brotherhood'.               |
| 488 | Auxiliar de ajusticiados.      | Aiding the condemned.               | Of the once-beautiful woman         | Contrasts former beauty.                         | 'Beautiful woman' -> 'once-beautiful woman'.           |
| 489 | De aquella mujer hermosa,      | Of that beautiful woman,            | Who charmed Don Nuño,               | Tragic fall from grace.                          | 'Delight' -> 'charmed'.                                |
| 490 | Que fué de don Nuño encanto,   | Who was Don Nuño's delight,         | There remain no signs               | No beauty left in her.                           | 'Signs' -> 'signs of her former beauty'.               |
| 491 | No se miran en el rostro       | Not seen in her face                | Of her former beauty.               | Face shows suffering and ruin.                   | 'Grim place' -> 'terrible place'.                      |
| 492 | Ni los más ligeros rasgos.     | Are even the slightest traits.      | She arrives at the grim place,      | Scene of ultimate punishment.                    | 'Eyes lowered' -> 'cast down'.                         |
| 493 | Llega hasta el horrible sitio, | She reaches the terrible place,     | Her eyes cast down,                 | Final humiliation.                               | 'Hearing priests' -> 'hearing the priests'.            |
| 494 | Siempre con los ojos bajos,    | Always with eyes lowered,           | Hearing the priests                 | Lowered eyes reflect shame.                      | PLACEHOLDER (needs filling)                            |
| 495 | Oyendo a los sacerdotes        | Hearing the priests                 | PLACEHOLDER (needs filling)         | Spiritual moment before death.                   | PLACEHOLDER (needs filling)                            |
| 496 | Que van por ella rezando;      | That go praying for her;            | Praying as they went for her;       | Shows solemnity of execution ritual.             | 'Rezando' as 'praying' signals solemnity.              |
| 497 | Pero al subir al patíbulo      | But upon climbing the gallows       | But as she climbed the scaffold     | Entering the final moments before death.         | 'Patibulo' translated as 'scaffold' for clarity.       |
| 498 | Alza la faz con espanto,       | She lifts her face in fright,       | She raised her face in terror,      | Terror at facing judgment and fate.              | 'Faz' as 'face', poetic tone kept.                     |
| 499 | Y reconoce su casa,            | And recognizes her house,           | And saw her home,                   | Recognition of personal doom.                    | 'Casa' as 'home' fits natural English.                 |
| 500 | Y se yergue, y de sus labios   | And rises up, and from her lips     | And stood tall, from her lips       | Sign of spiritual and emotional release.         | 'Se yergue' -> 'stood tall' reflects posture.          |
| 501 | Brota un terrible alarido      | Bursts a terrible scream            | A dreadful cry broke forth          | Supernatural or terrifying final cry.            | 'Brota' -> 'broke forth' captures suddenness.          |
| 502 | Que a todos infunde pasmo.     | That fills everyone with awe.       | That stunned all who heard.         | The awe of those present at her demise.          | 'Pasmo' as 'awe' softens 'terror'.                     |
| 503 | Con un temblor convulsivo      | With a convulsive tremor            | Trembling convulsively              | Emphasizes the depth of her terror               | "Convulsive" kept literal to highlight extreme emotion |
| 504 | Levanta al cielo las manos,    | She lifts her hands to heaven       | She raised her hands to the heavens | Gesture suggests desperation or appeal to divine | "To heaven" poetic but kept close to literal           |
| 505 | ...                            | ...                                 | ...                                 | ...                                              | ...                                                    |
| 506 | ...                            | ...                                 | ...                                 | ...                                              | ...                                                    |

|     |                               |                                      |                                   |                                                                 |                                                                       |
|-----|-------------------------------|--------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 507 | Las gentes de la justicia,    | The people of justice,               | The officers of justice,          | Legal authorities seen as impersonal agents.                    | 'Justicia' rendered as 'officers of justice'.                         |
| 508 | Al ejecutar el fallo,         | Upon carrying out the sentence,      | In carrying out the sentence,     | Formality and ritual in executions.                             | 'Fallo' -> 'sentence' as legal term.                                  |
| 509 | Lo hicieron ya en un cadáver  | Already made her a corpse            | Had already made her a corpse     | Moment of transition from life to myth.                         | 'Cadáver' and 'demacrado' fit as descriptive.                         |
| 510 | Contraído y demacrado.        | Contracted and emaciated.            | Twisted and wasted away.          | Description of physical aftermath and sorrow.                   | No figurative translation needed.                                     |
| 511 | Es fama que aquella tarde     | It is said that that afternoon       | It is said that later that day    | Narration shifts to legend after death.                         | 'Es fama' -> 'It is said' keeps oral tradition.                       |
| 512 | Llevaron al Campo-santo,      | They brought to the cemetery,        | They brought her to the cemetery, | Cemetery as transition to mythic status.                        | 'Campo-santo' -> 'cemetery' matches English usage.                    |
| 513 | Seguido de gran cortejo,      | Followed by a great cortege,         | With a grand procession,          | Funeral rites show communal participation.                      | 'Cortejo' as 'procession' conventional funeral term.                  |
| 514 | Y entre salmodias y cantos,   | And among psalms and songs,          | And with psalms and hymns,        | Religious elements elevate tragedy.                             | 'Salmodias' -> 'psalms' and 'cantos' -> 'hymns'.                      |
| 515 | Los restos del ya famoso      | The remains of the already famous    | The body of the once famed        | His name immortalized despite the shame.                        | 'Ya famoso' -> 'once famed' clarifies.                                |
| 516 | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros,    | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros,           | Don Nuño de Montes-Claros,        | Community remembers infamous figure.                            | Proper name retained without change.                                  |
| 517 | Y agregan que desde entonces  | And they say since then              | And from that day forward         | La Llorona legend begins officially.                            | 'Desde entonces' -> 'from that day forward'.                          |
| 518 | En las noches se ha escuchado | At night one hears                   | In the nights has been heard      | Ongoing ghostly legend starts here.                             | 'Se ha escuchado' -> 'has been heard'.                                |
| 519 | El grito de La Llorona,       | The cry of La Llorona,               | The cry of La Llorona,            | La Llorona is revealed as Luisa, symbolizing eternal suffering. | Name 'La Llorona' retained as cultural icon.                          |
| 520 | Que es Luisa, y anda penando, | Who is Luisa, and wanders suffering, | Luisa herself, forever grieving,  | Luisa becomes a wandering spirit, tormented.                    | 'Anda penando' -> 'wanders suffering' softened to 'forever grieving'. |
| 521 | Sin hallar para su alma       | Without finding for her soul         | Her soul never finding peace,     | The restless soul reflects the ghost story's tragic nature.     | 'Sin hallar' -> 'never finding' conveys the ongoing struggle.         |
| 522 | Un momento de descanso,       | A moment of rest,                    | Nor a moment's rest,              | Eternal unrest ties into punishment motifs in legends.          | 'Un momento de descanso' -> 'moment's rest' more natural in English.  |
| 523 | Como castigo a su culpa       | As punishment for her guilt          | Punished for her guilt            |                                                                 |                                                                       |
| 524 | Desde hace trescientos años.  | Since three hundred years ago.       | For three hundred years.          | Suggests endless suffering and supernatural p                   | 'Desde hace' -> 'For' keeps it simple and natural.                    |
|     |                               |                                      |                                   |                                                                 |                                                                       |